

Hadjjemmanuil, Christos

Prof. Christos Hadjiemmanuil, born in 1964, studied law at Athens University (LL.B.) and University College, London (LL.M. and Ph.D.). He practices law in Athens (member of the Athens Bar Association). A former Reader in Law at the London School of Economics and Political Science (LSE), he is currently a Professor of Monetary and Financial Institutions at the University of Piraeus and a Visiting Professor of Law at LSE.

From May 2004 until September 2007, he served as President and CEO of Hellenic Olympic Properties, the special-purpose company responsible for post-olympic management of the Athens 2004 Olympic facilities. From September 2007 until December 2009 he was Chairman and CEO of the OPAP S.A., one of Greece's largest corporations.

A specialist in European and international financial law and regulation, he has acted as a consultant to the International Monetary Fund (IMF), where he advised in the Global Bank Insolvency Initiative. He served as a member of the Advisory Board of the UNDP Regional Centre for Public Administration Reform. He has held a number of visiting academic and consultancy positions and is a member of the Monetary Law Committee of the International Law Association (MOCOMILA).

His publications include a monograph on Banking Regulation and the Bank of England (LLP, 1996) and a collected volume on European Economic and Monetary Union: The Institutional Framework (co-editor, Kluwer, 1997). He is the co-author of European Union Law (Cambridge Univ. Press, 2006) and author of a book in Greek on the development of European financial law (2007). He has written many articles and book chapters in the fields of UK, European and international banking and securities regulation, European Economic and Monetary Union and financial law reform.

He has been President, and is now Chairman of the Academic Advisory Board of the Athens-based Center for Political Research, Greece's oldest non-governmental think-tank.
